

HORANADU · CHIKKAMAGALURU

The Malnad pantry, weighed out in Horanadu.

Coffee and masala blends we grind and pack ourselves under Swad, alongside oils, syrups and estate goods from a dozen makers across the Malnad. Nothing sits pre-bagged on a shelf — we weigh your order when it comes in.

OUR SHOP

A counter in Horanadu.

We grind and pack our own coffee, tea and masala blends under the Swad name, at Devaramane on the Horanadu road. The sambar powder, the puliyogare, the bisibele bath — those are ours, and they are mixed in small lots rather than milled by the tonne.

What we do not make, our neighbours do. A dozen Malnad makers share this counter: ghani-pressed coconut oil from Madanthyar, squashes from Nanjangud, tea from Kalasa. We stock them because people here already buy them.

The everyday tea we pack under Swad at Horanadu — a strong, fine-cut leaf meant for milk and sugar, the way it is made in a Malnad kitchen.

Brews dark and fast. One heaped spoon to a cup, boiled with milk rather than steeped. Also sold in 250 g and 1 kg.
